Notation rules in unmeasured parts

In this piece there are some nonstandard notation symbols. The following applies to the parts that is supposed to be played without strict pulse (rubatolike).

There are, in some cases, an indication of how to play it, slow or fast, but this is merely a suggestion, and is of course not applicable on any strict pulse (since there are none).

 = short note

 = long note

 = very short note, or ornament

 = phrase ending

 = rest (unless when placed above a note, then used as a normal fermata)

Other special symbols and instructions

 = normal tremolo, unmeasured or as fast as possible between the two surrounding

It is quite clearly indicated in the violin part when to be synchronized with the computer part and when to be separate. In more difficult sections following an unmeasured section there are upbeats in the computerpart, to indicate the following tempo.

Durata approx. 16 min.

The computer part

To play the computer part one need an Apple computer (at least G3)

MAX/msp software version 4.0

optional soundcard (to enhance output quality)

PA system of two channels

one (condenser) microphone to amplify the violin

It is preferable to amplify the violin (using a microphone) in the same system as outputs the computer, in order to blend the two parts properly.

The computerpart only outputs prerecorded material, dvided in 18 sections. The numbering of these sections correlates to the enclosed numbering in the score.

In order to play the piece the musician playing the computerpart but has to follow the violin.

All sections are able to overlap each other, and all are also slightly longer than necessary, to prevent unintended pauses in the music.

More often than not the computerpart is not entirely accurate represented in the score. Please regard the score only as a means of correlating the violin part to the computer.

A (static) version for CD/tape is also available.
